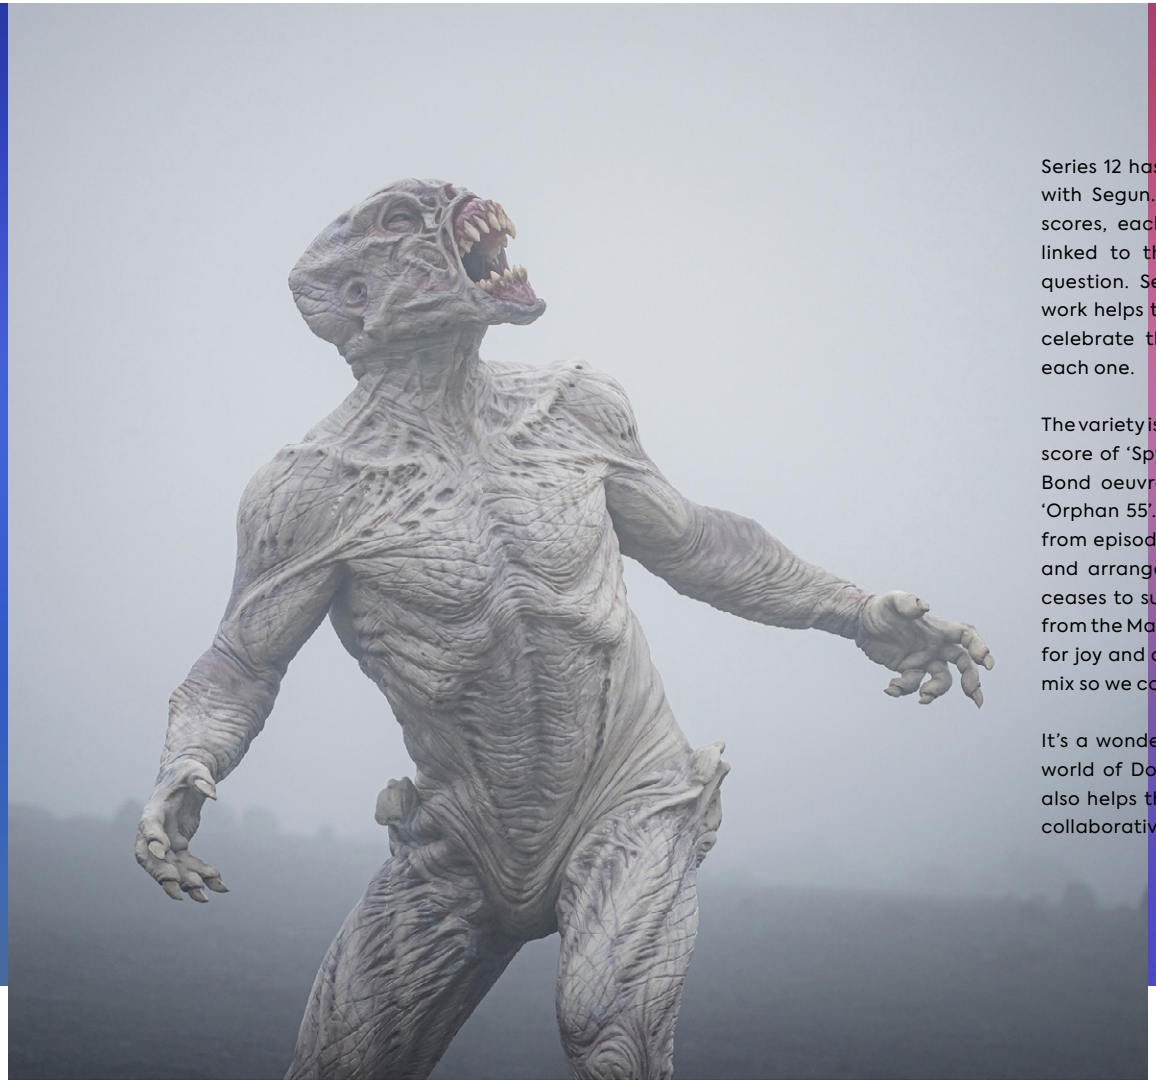
23 Ascension of the Cybermen End Credits



Series 12 has been another voyage of sonic delights with Segun. Yet again he has curated 10 bespoke scores, each one varied and fresh and intimately linked to the tone and genre of the episode in question. Segun is a masterful storyteller and his work helps to bring each story further to life and to celebrate the emotions and narrative tensions in each one.

The variety is there, yet again, from the epic orchestral score of 'Spyfall', with its loving nod to John Barry's Bond oeuvre to the electronic dystopian world of 'Orphan 55'. His reworking of the character theme's from episode to episode with new instrumentation's and arrangements to fit the varying worlds never ceases to surprise. Also the creation of new themes from the Master's to the Cybermen had me whooping for joy and always asking for the dial to go up in the mix so we could revel in them.

It's a wonderful body of work which celebrates the world of Doctor Who and brings it vividly to life. It also helps that Segun is one of the nicest and most collaborative artists you could wish to work with.

Matt Strevens, Executive Producer

Writing the music for Series 12 has been an incredible joy. With this series, Matt Strevens, Chris Chibnall and I wanted to build on all that we'd achieved in Series 11 and continue to make bold and brave musical decisions. I also wanted to develop the musical sound world so that the series would be distinguishable but related to that of Series 11.

With all the different stories and locations, the journey the gang have been on, the return of the Master, the Cybermen and so much more, I've had a lot of fun exploring how best the score for each episode can support the story.

I hope that you enjoy listening to this album as much as I've enjoyed writing the music!

Segun Akinola, Composer
