

INFORMER

ILAN ESHKERI

I composed Informer as five stand-alone pieces of music. Each piece is made up of repeating lines of melodies performed by individual instruments, like the characters in the show, weaving in and out of each other's lives with their own agendas. The score is made up from variations of these pieces of music, as the pieces of the puzzle come together in the show, so do the pieces of music.

For me the story is an exploration of identity and how a situation can change the perception of an individual. In the music, single lines of repeating melody build on top of each other creating changing harmonic perspectives. From the individual instrument perspective, it plays the same thing over and over again, but from the audience perspective everything is shifting every few bars. This builds in emotional tension to a climax and then resolution.

The album is presented with each complete piece and its variations following so that the listener can unravel the elements in the main piece.
